Architectural Representation: Visualization and Description

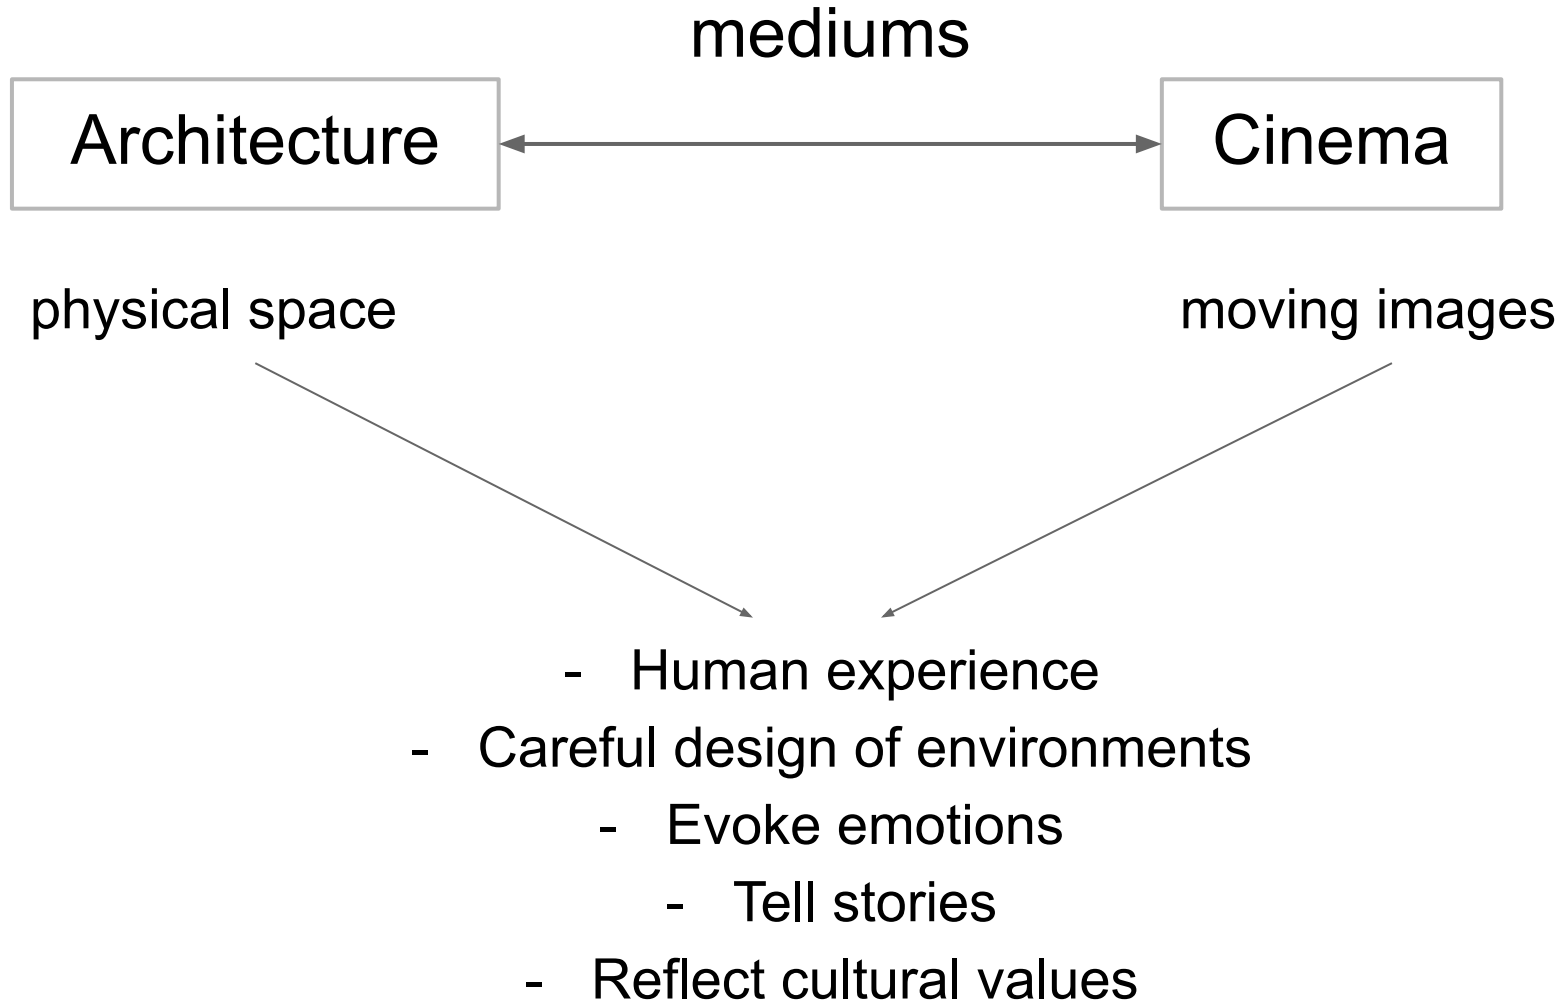

(Architectural Perspective on Design)

Lecture 8: Cinema and Architecture (12.12.2024)

This lecture delves into the deep connection between architecture and cinema, exploring how both disciplines shape human experiences through the design of environments. It examines the role of architecture in film as more than just a backdrop, but as a crucial element in establishing mood, symbolizing themes, and enhancing narrative. The lecture discusses how cinema inspires architectural practice, from design innovation to the use of cinematic techniques in architectural visualization and concludes with an exploration of future trends, including virtual reality and the ethical implications of architectural representation in film.

Cinema

Video Arts

Origins

Rooted in traditional filmmaking with a focus on narrative storytelling, developed as a commercial and artistic medium.

Emerged from experimental art practices in the 1960s with the advent of portable video technology.

Purpose

Typically aims to entertain, convey stories, or evoke emotional responses within a structured format.

Often focuses on exploration, abstraction, and conceptual ideas rather than storytelling. Common in galleries or non-traditional venues.

Medium

Historically associated with film reels, but now predominantly digital. Screenings usually occur in theaters or similar formal settings.

Primarily digital and designed for flexible formats, such as installations, screens, or projections.

Style

Employs established cinematic techniques like plot arcs, character development, and cinematic grammar (e.g., montage, mise-en-scène).

Freely experimental, embracing non-linear narratives, abstract visuals, and interdisciplinary integration (e.g., soundscapes, performance art).

Audience

Generally created for a mass audience with broad appeal.

Usually targets niche or art-centric audiences, encouraging interpretation and critical engagement.

Pickpocket, Robert Bresson (1959)

A black and white film still from the movie 'Pickpocket' by Robert Bresson. The central figure is a man in a dark suit, white shirt, and dark tie, looking down with a somber expression. He is surrounded by other people in a crowded, possibly public, setting. The background is slightly out of focus, showing architectural elements and other figures. The overall mood is one of quiet tension and observation.

Context and Subtext

Context in Architecture:

Refers to the environmental, historical, cultural, and social factors that surround a building or space.

Types of Context: (The obvious)

Physical

Cultural

Social

Temporal

→ Context grounds architecture in its place and time

Subtext in Architecture:

The underlying messages, ideas, or meanings conveyed by a building, beyond its explicit purpose.

Sources of Subtext: (The Iceberg Model)

Symbolism

Design Choices

Programmatic Elements

→ Subtext provides a deeper narrative layer, enriching the user's experience and interpretation.
